Industrial Hygiene

Brown Consulting Services, LLC industrial hygiene technique is performed by the sampling of air, soil, water or construction substances. Field Technicians will take small samples of air, water and other common substances found in the workplace. These samples will go to a lab for further investigation. The data from these reports will tell the employer about the workplace environment over the long term, and establish historical data for OSHA compliance. If harmful materials are found in the samples that are taken, it will alert the employer to remove or fix the problem so that the employees or public at large will have a safe environment to work, live and play in.

What we offer:

- Air Quality Testing
- Monitoring for asbestos, lead, hexavalent chromium and welding fumes.
- Monitoring for dust, mold and other dangerous substances that may exist in the workplace or home.

Industrial Hygiene Sample Rates

Sample pricing is based on lab fees for client testing plus a 15% service fee. Sample prices may vary at the discretion of the lab, by the type of test performed, by the number of samples taken, or by the addition of shipping or extra costs incurred by the client.
